

EDITORIAL

On behalf of the Editorial Board and Synergy publishers, it is with pleasure that I announce the official launch of the Journal of Cardiology and Therapeutics. The goal of this journal is to provide a platform for researchers and scientists to promote and discuss the new developments in all the areas of Cardiovascular Diseases.

Man moves forwards through the process of posing questions and looking for the answers. It is not the answers you get which define your progress, but the experience and knowledge you have gained. These are the driving forces to new questions and ideas. You must be brave enough to get out of the boundaries and safety of the common knowledge. Our purpose is to give voice in all the brave voices and in all the new ideas. None of the great achievements have developed de novo but was the results of decades of research.

Journal of Cardiology and Therapeutics will start with 2 issues per year but I believe we will increase our activities in near future.

I would like to offer my honest thanks to the experienced team of production Editors and other staff at Synergy publishers for their hard work.
